Online Games that Work!

The following list of online games has been compiled based on the experience of running fully virtual camps during the summer of 2020

- Scavenger Hunt - Make it a rule that it can't be anything they're wearing. Also try a riddle scavenger hunt; they have to figure out the clue for the object
- Charades
- Movie Game - Give 3 clues about a movie (ex. There's an apple, a mirror, and short men with beards). If no one can figure it out, the kids take turns asking yes or no questions to narrow it down
- 20 Questions
- Mystery Bag - like 20 questions; try to figure out what object is in the bag
- I'm going on a picnic...
- 2 Truths, 1 Lie - Make three statements, kids show on fingers which number they think is the lie
- Zoomed In - screen share extreme close ups of photos, kids guess what it is.
- Storyteller - for creative types. Taking turns, each person adds 1 sentence to the story
- Would You Rather - Kids can show on fingers which they would pick. Can also share why
- Magnet Memory Game - Using something magnetic (I used the lid to a tin), show kids a board of magnets for 30 seconds. Then, take one away, and they have to figure out what's missing
- The Interview Game - Definitely for older kids; a leader interviews the kids (asking each a question), but the tricky thing is the kids must answer the previous question. So the leader starts by asking a question to no one, then picks a kid and asks them a different question. The kid responds with the answer to the first question. So for example, the first question could be "what's your favourite animal?" Then they say a kids name and ask "what's your middle name?". The kid would have to reply with their favourite animal, which makes for some very funny answers!

Games that need Paper/Whiteboards

- Bingo - They set up their own sheets on paper
- Scattergories - Leader picks a letter, kids have a minute to write everything they can think of that starts with that letter. Could also have a category; like food or places to make it harder
- Hangman - We found this worked well if everyone wrote it down for themselves and the leader showed theirs often
